"Is Jack Tunnicliffe going with you to morrow, Tom?" said my wife to me. "I wish you would take some one else."

Was It Justifiable?

Why. Norah?" I asked. "He's been stranger than ever in his man-ner since his wife died, I hear. In fact, I've been told by more than one person that he's quite insane at times. It's not to be wondered at if he is, poor fellow. I don't know a sadder case. He'd only been married a week. Such a horrible death, too! It's enough to turn a man's brain, and I must confess, Tom, I wish Jack was not going with you." sense, Norah! People always exaggerate and make the worst of things, as you know. If a man's at all original or eccentric it's at once assumed that he's non compos. Of course, Jack's low spirited and absent minded, and perhaps a bit pecultur at times. How can be help brooding over his terrible loss? He wants some exciting occupation to take his thoughts from s trouble. He's as fond of ballooni I am, and a trip will do him all the good in the world,"

The above conversation between my wife and myself took place on the evening before cent. Ballooning was my bobby. conceived a liking for it on my very first ascent. This liking had become a "craze," for the povel experience and strange sen-sation of sailing over houses and trees and of soaring into the clouds had a peculiar fascination for me.

Recently, I had tried to combine utility with pleasure, and had made some ascents solely for scientific purposes. I had found a kindre dspirit in young Tunnichiffe, and live had had many delightful and successful trips together. Owing to the untimely death of my friend's wife, our actual expeditions had been suspended for a white. As several weeks had elapsed since that and event, I felt anxious to resume these ex-peditions, and as Tunnicliffe had expressed his willingness to accompany me, a day had been fixed for our next trip. It was when I was talking to my wife about this self-sime trip that she expressed her regret that Jack Tunnicliffe was going with me.

I had not much difficulty, however, inover-oming her objections and allaying her fears. Accordingly, thenextday, at the appointed time, everything being in readiness started on our aerostatic journey. Tunnistarted on our aerosistic journey. Tunni-cliffe, contrary to his usual demensor, seemed a trifle excited, but this caused me no approbension. His interest had appar-ently been awakened, and it was only nat-ural that he should be animated on such an occasion. The balloon was set at liberty as occasion. The balloon was set at liberty as soon as we had taken our seats, and the machine rose beautifully. There was a gentle breeze, which fore us gestly southward. We rose slowly at first and so had pleuty of time to gare on the vast and extending panorama below us.

Presently we entered huge bank ormountain of cloud of the kind called cummins, and were surrounded by chilling mist which induced us to put on the wraps we had brought. When we emerged from the cloud, a score of fairy-like beauty suddenly barst upon us. We were in a kind of basin surrounded by mouthains of cloud of the most daziling brightness. Now and then, as we rose, we caught sight, also, of wondross ravines of curtous snape and great depth. These mountains of clouds, with their silvery and golden sides, their dark shadows, their varied time and summits of daziling whiteness, presented to our wondering gaze a score of surpassing beauty and granideur.

This sublime spectacle evoked my highest admiration, while the silence and vastness of space inspired me with awe I drawk in these exquisite and varied delights with such avolation from him now diverted my attention, and, glancing at him, and was name excited.

"Went is it, Jack." I asked.

"Wint is it, Jack." I asked.

I'm going to try, anyhow. Besides, I don't care if we can't breathe. I want to see my Ada. That's all I care about."

I began to fear the worst. Was he going mad? Were the reports my wife had beard literally true, and not exaggerated, after all? What a fool I had been not to be more cautious. Whether he was mad or not he was in a dangerous mood, and my position was far from pichasant. To oppose him would evidenily aggravate him and make matters worse. To humorhim was undoubtedly the wisest course.

"Look here, Jack." I cried, "you say want to see Ada; I can tell you of a better and surer way of going to her than this.
